LOCAL COAL SUPPLY SUFFICIENT FOR WEEK ONLY; DEALERS IN FUEL HAVE BUT 225 TONS LEFT IN BINS

CANVASS OF NINE DISTRIBUTORS IN CITY REVEALS STARTLING SHORTAGE; CONSERVATION IS ASKED BY RAILROAD DIRECTOR.

Janesville's coal situation took on a more serious aspect today when a canvass of the nine fuel distributors in the city revealed the startling information that there are but 225 tons of coal in the bins which have not been sold. With united conservation this supply may last week.

The break in freezing weather which has gripped the city for two days furnished the only bright side to the situation today. Some relief was also gained when it was learned that the public schools have their complete supplies for the winter on hand.

Although the fire stations are well supplied, the city hall has but two weeks' supply.

Coal in Transit.

Three of the nine dealers have no coal which is in actual contract with them—the highest amount held by any one dealer is but 50 tons. Although many of the distributors have cars of coal believed to be in transit, little hope is held out that they will be received, as it has been learned that coal is being confiscated by the government and railroad along the line.

Major T. F. Welsh received a letter today from Capt. F. J. Byington of the Wisconsin division of the Northwestern railroad, appealing to this country's coal miners to unite in efforts to conserve fuel.

Appeals for Conservation.

The appeal asks that all public institutions, office buildings, hotel departments, stores, restaurants, schools, theatres, residences and all other structures using heat or light observe the following rules:

Do not waste hot water. Every gallon wasted wastes so much fuel.

Turn off radiators in all rooms not in actual use.

Turn out lights in waste of fuel.

Ventilate properly but do not waste heat.

These instructions should be construed so as to in no way cause suffering or hardship, Sup't. Byington states.

Coal Orders Refused.

The canvass today brought out the fact that the Elfield Coal Co., F. H. Quinn, and Westinghouse & Monies, have recently stopped taking orders for any kind of coal, and are exerting themselves to supply consumers whose orders are on file.

The W. J. Baker Co. has approximately 50 tons of hard coal, which has not been sold. The Collier Bros. have less than this amount in the bins for sale. Herman Lichtenfus has 50 tons of coke not sold, but not a pound of anthracite or bituminous coal. The Janesville Coal Co. has in the neighborhood of 25 tons of hard coal; the Consumers' Fuel Co., Inc., about 25 tons of bituminous, while Brittingham & Son have 25 tons, which includes both hard and soft coal, together with screenings.

WIDER HORIZON IN NEWSPAPERS URGED

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

JANESVILLE, Nov. 29.—Our newspapers are undertaking a new intelligence of the world's news," said George C. Glavin, chief editorial writer of the Chicago Evening Post, speaking before the convention of the Wisconsin Inter-Collegiate Press association at Lathrop hall last night.

"We in America need a wider horizon in our newspaper work," he said. "America has come into a new relationship to the world. We must look beyond the problems of Madison, or of Chicago, and understand those of Washington, Berlin, London and Moscow, so that we can anticipate the things that will influence our nation in the future."

FOUNDED!

She lost a bunch of keys. They were valuable and had to be found. She was advised to place a classified ad in the Gazette. She did that right—and she did it the next morning she had them.

A man had found the keys, just read about their loss told in the classified ad, and returned them to the owner and collected the reward.

Youth Gives Blood to Aid Girl He Shot

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Florence Robinson, a young mother, Lynn, near Dutchess, New York, Grover Gordon, a little more than a youth, who because he said he loved her yesterday shot the woman through the body and who for the same announced results 14 hours later kept alive by giving her blood for transfusion to her veins, today were the principals in one of the most remarkable crime incidents in Washington police history.

Following a quarrel recently Gordon, yesterday went to the home of the woman, who some time ago had separated from her husband, to bid her goodbye as he expected to leave that day for his old home in Wheeling, West Virginia. As she stood in his embrace he gave her a revolver shot through her body.

After his arrest last night Gordon was told that Mrs. Robinson would live unless someone speedily volunteered to submit to blood transfusion. Gordon, who had tried to kill the patient still was conscious that she be told of his action.

Physicians today said it was too early to say whether the operation would prove a cabiner life. In the meantime the police were wondering what the effect would be should the woman whom Gordon had tried to kill be saved from death through his own sacrifice of blood.

RAIL YARD STRIKE IN KANSAS CITY IS NOT BY UNION CALL

BY SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 29.—Two thousand railroaders in and yardmen of Kansas City are to go to the plant and the afternoon session at 4 o'clock to a tour of inspection of this new industry will be made at the luncheon Monday noon. The date for the Samson party will be determined.

All of the railroads entering Kansas City will be affected with the exception of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific.

W. M. Corbett, president of the Kansas City Terminal and the government railroad representative here said he was doing everything he could to keep the terminal men from striking.

It is said the strike order resulted from local grievances and it was hinted that a radical element among the railroad workers was responsible for its issuance.

If A. C. Corbett, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen here, issued the following warning to trainmen:

"There has been an unauthorized strike called to take effect at 12 o'clock, November 29, involving all yard men in the greater Kansas City district. As a result of this strike call, it is assumed that a large number of the men will respond and the purpose of it is not to advise you one of this character is to keep the local Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and anyone participating therein down so on his own responsibility and thereby force any protection otherwise granted him under the laws of the railroad.

It is needless to state that the unionists are becoming familiar with the development which is now under way. It is hoped that when the date is decided upon as many members as possible will plan to spend the afternoon in looking over the plant, young men who have signified their desire to form a Janesville booster club, will be in attendance at the luncheon and will make the tour of inspection.

WOLF SCALP BRINGS $50; SUGGEST HUNT

"All right, Mr. Leo, I am after that," said Herman H. Riedel, farmer living in the town of Center as he laid the scalp of a huge wolf on the table in the office of State Game Commissioner Howard W. Clark yesterday afternoon. He had killed the beast at his farm.

A bounty amounting to $50 was paid Mr. Riedel for the trouble he took in barging the wolf and bringing the scalp to the state Game Rock County sheriff's county of $25 and the state a similar amount.

Ell Cram, Evansville, who accompanied Mr. Riedel stated that a war was to be declared on wolves in the vicinity of Center.

Deprachers have been occurring during the past few weeks can not be tolerated," he said. "It is expected that an old time wolf hunt will soon be staged in that vicinity."

Other districts may follow suit as reports have been received that wolves have invaded pastures, barn yards and chicken coops in various parts of the county and that some have been bold enough to venture in as far as the outskirts of some of the villages.

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

WHAT BOYS CAN BE

A Private Secretary
By Elizabeth Mateo.
"Some girls are just born lucky," said Fluff as she primed up the fifth time that morning.

"What does it mean?" asked the boy at Miss Wright's. "Remember when she came here? It took her all morning to type six letters. Now she is in the boss' office giving dictation to the rest of us. Pure luck, that's all."

"I'm not so sure about that, Fluff," responded the boy. "I used to think she was a snob because she went straight to pounding in the morning and never took time to tell us about the night before."

"Well, I found out something else about her last week. We wondered

"Think you'll make anything out of that calf, Billy?" asked Uncle Dick back from Arizona on a visit.

"Always do," said Billy, giving a bucket of milk to the calf his father had given him. "See, I'd like to have him when he grows up."

"Well, if you feel that way about it, why not come west and be a stock raiser?" Then you can have all the thoroughbreds you want. The stock raising business is a good one."

Billy's eyes began to shine. "But, see, Uncle Dick, I don't know enough about cattle."

"Of course not. But you can learn. Finish your high school and then pick the high school to settle in. Next, the cattle raising is done in the west and south. Take a course in Animal Husbandry in the State Agricultural College of the state you pick. It would be a good idea to work in a course or two in chemistry, crop production, and farm management."

Billy's face was glum. "Aw, it's no use. Dad couldn't spare all that money."

"Who said anything about Dad's spending it? You can get a job on a stock farm in summer and make a good part of it. I'll give you work on my ranch if you can't find any-where else."

"That's just it, Fluff. Still isn't the only thing in this job. You hear so much about the need of loyalty, responsibility, and originality in secretaries. Well, how are you going to come forward with brilliant suggestions for something you don't care a straw about?"

"Do you know what I've decided to do? I've been looking up the opportunities for secretaries. Of course there are always openings in college, public schools, law offices, doctors' offices, advertising agencies. But I haven't had the education or special training for most of these. But I've always been crazy about business, so I'm looking for a job in a real estate or insurance office."

"May I ask you, Fluff? That's the secret. There are plenty of openings for secretaries with banks, advertising offices, architects, engineers, and commercial houses. You've been a 'crazy' long enough."

"Maybe I will," said Fluff, taking the empty milk bucket from the calf and starting toward the house.

(Next week: "The Home Secretary.")

BARCELONA.

While the United States is coping with the coal miners' strike Spain has industrial troubles of an opposite sort—a national lockout of workers. Barcelona, meeting place of the employers' congress which ordered this drastic action, is the subject of the following bulletin from the National Geographic society:

"Barcelona is the chameleon city of Spain. In some quarters streets are narrower and more crooked than those of old London; in others are avenues, boulevards, shops and cafes, which vie with those of Paris. The city has an aristocracy which lives so far in the past that its scions still deplore the discovery of America. These gentle patricians are undisturbed by the agitators for all sorts of political and economic novelties."

"Until 1492 Barcelona was the New York of the Mediterranean. Its position in the northeastern coast of Spain, actually at about the same latitude as New York City, relatively is to the Mediterranean world what the western city is to Atlantic trade routes. Columbus' voyage was considered a bit of impertinence on the part of the Castilian government to upset the balance of trade in favor of cities in western and southern Spain.

"Soon a movement swept the Catalan provinces, of which Barcelona is the center, for annexation to France. In 1384 Catalonia did rebel against Philip IV, gave itself over to French protection, but its old allegiance was renewed in 1652, and cemented by the peace of Ryswick before the close of the seventeenth century.

"In four centuries this resentment had ameliorated enough to permit the placing of a statue of Christopher Columbus in the Rambla, fifth avenue of Barcelona.

"After the Spanish-American war mobs of Barcelona citizens stoned and egged the explorer's statue 'as punishment for his having ventured to find so troublesome a new world for Spain.'

"Despite its commercial subsidence when the Atlantic replaced the Mediterranean as the major-water route of civilization, Barcelona flourished. A year after the late war between George Dewey and Spain, as O. Henry put it, Barcelona paid more than a tenth of the Kingdom's entire revenue from industrial taxation. Before the World War some two score important shipping companies had made it a port of regular call, and today the city has a population exceeding half a million.

"In respect to publicity Barcelona has hardly put its best foot forward, since it is heard of most often as a center of riots, strikes, and rebellions. Though one traveler found the citizens pleasantly surprised that King Alfonso, who had just visited there, had escaped with his life, he concluded after staying a time that, with all her reputation for turbulence Barcelona seemed an enlightened and thoroughly progressive city. Havelock Ellis paid a more glowing tribute, after admitting the city's faults, by saying, 'Barcelona is a revelation of what a great commercial city may be when humanely and harmoniously organized. It is a beautiful and exquisitely tempered climate, a robustly independent and clear-eyed population has here freely expanded itself, loving work and loving play, and combining these two fundamental human impulses more completely and more admirably than in any other equally great city.'

"Despite its disorders and its modernism, Barcelona retains many relics of those mellow times when Cervantes made it the setting for Don Quixote's later adventures. There still are church processions, lottery ticket sellers, policemen with red coats and helmets, flower stalls and caged bird vendors. Folklore embellishes the story of the girlish martyr, Saint Eularia, whose ashes lie in the Barcelona cathedral, perhaps the darkest of all great churches, and among the most beautiful in Spain. Cool fountains play in the cloister garden, among oleanders, and orange and lemon trees, and pools disclose geese, et violators of the mediaeval sanctity, but contributory to it, when one learns they are descended from the birds formerly used for augury.

"Many of Barcelona's political disturbances may be attributed to a difference of temperament between the Catalans and the southern Spaniard; a difference akin to that between the Yankee and the Dixie plantation owner before the Civil war welded our common interests so indissolubly. The Catalan more nearly resembles his thrifty, enterprising, practical French neighbor than the courtly, dreamy Castilian. Moreover, the Catalan emphasizes this difference by speaking and writing in his own dialect, called the harshest of Romance tongues."

NOW FOR CHRISTMAS!

With Thanksgiving simply a memory, the country settles down today to "Do its Christmas shopping early" and the count up each day just how many "days to Christmas."

It will be varied a little this season. All restrictions have been removed from purchases and the sky is the limit so far as official Washington is concerned.

Utility was the watchword during the last several holiday seasons. The war made people careful buyers, and the wise merchant stocked his stores with things that were useful rather than ornamental. Will it be different this season? Will the buyers go to the other extreme with plenty of funds, prosperity ahead and restrictions removed?

If one will notice the stores of the city, and their stock of goods, one will notice more ornamental gift suggestions than for several seasons, but not to such a great extent as before the war.

The war taught many a lesson that will be remembered. Others have already forgotten in the flow of easy riches, and gifts that should be useful will be ornamental.

But the holiday season will be one of the biggest in the history of the country. Merchants are expecting the biggest business in a decade. One need only glance at the many advertisements in this paper to understand what preparations the stores are making for this holiday season.

And it should be so. The United States is in the best financial state it ever was in. The banks show a great prosperity. The people feel a great relief after a period of war time economics. The nation needs the jolliest sort of a holiday season. And the nation is going to have it get it, too.

HERE IS THE POINT.

In this country a person may lawfully advocate the changing of our form of government to rule by a king or a commune. He may urge the abolition of congress, the doing away with the office of president, the disbandment of our entire army and navy, or he may go around making speeches declaring that our democratic form of

THE SIMPLER LIFE.
Go for the honors if you will,
And treat the stony heights to fame;
Fight for the rich rewards of skill,
And seek life's jeweled crown to claim.
But as for me, I'll plod along
Where humble people line the way
And find my joy in simple song
And common pleasures day by day.

Fight for the glory of the great
And claim for them brief success;
I know a little swinging gate
That leads to lasting happiness.
I would not shirk my duties here,
Nor fail the purpose of my birth,
But I would live from year to year
And claim the lasting joys of earth.

I choose to tread the simpler ways
Where men and women nod and smile,
Not over eager for men's praise,
Nor over fond of pomp and style,
But glad when I can play the friend,
And proud when men are friends to me.
Contented that I've time to spend,
With any man wh'lever he be.

I choose to know my children well.
To live my little life at home,
To take from toll a resting spell;
And let who will forever roam.
I'll find beneath my roof tree gay
The sweet and simple joys that live,
And reap along the humble way
All that a span of years can give.

government has failed and that we should return to the status of a monarchy.

But—and this is a big but—he must be extremely careful as to the advocating of the means whereby he would bring about such radical changes in our governmental system. There is the point which professional martyrs frothing about "free speech" and "liberty of action" conveniently ignore. One way only is provided for altering our form of government: The orderly expression of the will of the majority. The minority who would express and enforce their will through violence are traitors. And our courts have held that treason can be committed even by those who are not citizens.

As congress will convene in regular session on December 1, the statesmen who went home will just about have time to walk in, turn around, and then walk out again.

Their Opinions

One difficulty as to arbitration is the taking of principles to conferences which are not to be arbitrated. If tenets are to be religiously observed, the underground structures of all strikes remain unsettled. But most obviously the government as a factor can not recognize any difference between organized and unorganized labor, therefore must recognize the open shop.—Racine Journal-News.

A Japanese editorial, commenting upon the aggressions of the country, says this is the fault of the present system of things, but that under a league pact, his country will possess a sufficient military force to help preserve the peace of the world. Naturally, but any peace with great armies and navies is an enforced peace which can not continue long.—Oshkosh Northwestern.

That man Horan, who thought he had divine instructions to tell the senate a few things from the gallery, isn't crazy. We all have divine instructions to do good, and the desire to tell the senate a few things is universal.—Boilot News.

THE IDEAL APARTMENT.

This ideal apartment is one which you are not living in. You can tell the world that.

When people in a small town get together for a social evening they talk about their operations. When people in a big city get together they talk about their apartments. Is it conceivable that a question which is the more painful, an operation or an apartment?

Chasing a mirage in the Sahara desert is an amateur sport compared to stalking the ideal apartment. You have got to be born to it, your friends you have got it and then—

You move in. Moving into an apartment is a mistake. If people could stay out of ideal apartments and admire them from a distance, they might retain a few of the 5,873 which they had when they rented the place.

It may continue to be the ideal apartment for 24 hours after you move in. On the second day you begin looking again for the ideal somebody's ideal apartment.

It is possible to live with every ideal apartment is that there is something the matter with it.

When you give up searching for the ideal apartment you move out to the suburbs in a house that you buy, dollar down, and when the time comes to move back into town into somebody's ideal apartment.

STOCK RAISERS WILL CONSIDER PAVILION AT FAIR GROUNDS

The matter of building a sales pavilion at the Fair Grounds here for dealing in Holstein cattle will be taken up at a meeting of the Rock County Holstein-Friesian Breeder's association to be held in the assembly room of the city hall, December 2. With more demand being constantly added to the association, it is believed that such a building will be of invaluable aid in the raising of Holsteins in the county. The question of holding a sale will also be discussed.

This meeting is being held in conjunction with a state-wide campaign to help Wisconsin at the head of the list of states as a breeder of Holsteins. President D. D. Aiken of the National Holstein Feeders' association will make an address and Mr. Pollock, a well-known expert, will give some pointers.

Following a dinner to be held at the Myers Hotel at noon, an election of officers of the association will be held. Members and prospective members will attend.

SAMSON MIXER WELL ATTENDED

One hundred and sixty couples attended the informal Samson mixer held at the Armory last evening. Two hundred tickets had been issued, but because of the inclement weather it is thought that many who had purchased tickets did not venture out.

Dancing started promptly at 8 o'clock and continued until 11. Music was furnished by the Lakota club orchestra.

The hall was prettily decorated with green and yellow streamers which extended from the center to all sides. Through the courtesy of Leath's furniture store, four corners were spruced up. They added much to the comfort of the dancers.

Light refreshments in the form of ice cream and wafers were served to all present at 11 by John Hagen, proprietor of the cafe, corner Milwaukee and Franklin streets, who offered his services for the occasion.

Attendance was not so well attended as previous Samson mixers, it was voted one of the most enjoyable evenings spent by all present. Other mixers are to follow in the near future which will later terminate into a series of winter activities for Samson employees. The affair was in charge of L. D. V. Douglas, director of the welfare committee of the Samson Tractor company.

SCOBIE HOME WITH STOLEN CAR; SIGNS FOR TRIO'S ARREST

James Scobie returned from Sycamore, Ill., last night driving the touring car which was stolen from him a month ago probably by professional auto thieves. He declared that the carbon had been burned from the engine and the valves had been ground putting the machine in better condition than it was a month ago, despite the hard usage believed to have been given it by the trio of thieves.

The three whom police say stole Scobie's car are: Carle Lee, Peter Hagley, Frank Bogher. They may be being held at Grayslake in connection with a series of auto robberies there. They are also believed to be guilty of thefts in Minneapolis and other cities. It is presumed they used Scobie's car to travel around to escape detection.

Through advice of Chief Morrissey, Scobie has signed a complaint against them and a warrant is now out for their arrest if they should be released by Indianapolis police.

The Presbyterian women will hold their annual Xmas Sale Tuesday, Dec. 2nd, at the Federated Church. Sale starts at one o'clock. Fancy articles, baskets, doll clothes, Japanese Goods, and Home Baking will be sold.

MEDICAL SOCIETY COUNTY FARM GUESTS

Knights of the story table bartered for picture books at the library this morning waiting for the Story Lady to begin her act.

"I'll trade books with you, James. This one's awful funny."

Being "awful funny" didn't prevail upon Sir James to make the barter. Instead, the knight with the knight across the table.

The knight who had first made the offer forgot his vows of knighthood and threatened Sir James that he wouldn't come over to his castle this afternoon.

Inclement weather prevented many small children from attending the story hour. Twenty, however, braved the storm and skidded down to the library, patterning about outside in the slush until 10:30 o'clock came as they open session.

Thanksgiving stories were told by Miss Emily Cullen, the children's librarian. They were: "The Horn of Plenty," "The Turkey's Nest," "The Cat that Walked Himself."

*Johnson's Grocery Store
Changes Hands Monday*

The H. S. Johnson grocery store at 111 East Milwaukee street, which for 27 years has been owned by the Leath family, was established. It has been sold to Leonard and Edward Jerg, both of this city, and Charles Coepeen, Marshfield. The new owners take possession Monday, continuing the business under the firm name of the Jerg Grocery company.

The store was sold by Mrs. Julian M. Johnson, who has had charge of it since the death of her husband.

Now leased by Lakota Club may be rented for dances, card parties, etc. Rent $15.00 per night. Enclosure Geo. J. Sennett, 125 E. Milwaukee St. Bell phone 56; R. C. 508 red.

Was Ben Franklin Wrong?

Ben Franklin said a great many wise things. One saying of his that is very often quoted is: "A dollar saved is a dollar."

But this statement is called in question now. An old friend of this bank says it is not so. He says:

"It is impossible for a man to save all he earns. On the average a man will have to earn about $25 for every $5 he saves. If he can save an extra $5 it is equal to earning an extra $25. A dollar saved is equal to $5 earned."

What do you think about it? Rather interesting to think about isn't it.

NORTH SPRING VALLEY

By Gazette Correspondent

Orfordville, Nov. 28.—Thanksgiving day, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Osgard, occurred the wedding of their daughter, Cora, to Gilman Grangard, of the town of Spring Valley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. J. Kyval Benton, Minn., and for many years pastor of the Lutheran church at Orfordville. Only the immediate relatives were present to enjoy the occasion. A wedding dinner was served to about 20.

In spite of the storm Friday there was a good attendance at the O. J. Benton auction sale. Good price prevailed.

Will Staven has sold his residence in the village and is contemplating the raising of tobacco the coming season and will move his family to the country.

Oscar Nelson, Janesville, was in the village for a short time Friday. Gilman Grangard and Miss Osgard, Orfordville, were married.

Oscar is no longer a bachelor with Thursday.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There are two young men in love with me. One is very wealthy and very dignified, while the other is poor but honest and free-hearted.

My parents object very seriously to my keeping company with the poor one, mainly because he is poor and cannot afford to give me all the luxuries I have been used to. They wish me to marry the rich young man regardless of my feelings. I love the poor one very deeply and while I like the other one as a friend I fear I can never love him.

Would you advise me to marry the man I love regardless of my parents' wishes?

WORRIED.

My answer to you would depend upon your age which you have not mentioned. If you are in your twenties use your own judgment; in case you decide the rich man will be better do so with all faith that you will be happy. If you are still in your teens wait a few years before you make a decision.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a single man of twenty-nine years and have been going with a girl for about three years. I have been going with her about two years and I loved her dearly. She told me she loved me too, and let me kiss her any time I wanted to. I thought the world of her.

One night in May I went over to see her as usual and she told me that she couldn't go with me any more and never wanted to see me again. Since that time I have not had a chance to speak to her.

I wrote her about four or five times and she did not answer my letters. I can't understand why she is so angry at me, for I did everything

Draped Hats For Youthful Faces

She Married an Average Man

By ZOE BECKLEY.

Doubt is the worst thing of all. Let a wife know her husband is unfaithful and the knowledge steals her to definite action. She condones and purchases her livelihood at the cost of self-respect. Or she refuses to forgive and goes her heartbroken alone.

In the watch of this night that much at least I have decided—that I shall not be snayed by Doubt. I shall find out who and what this Fanny Fribble is—this woman of forty-two who leaves her husband and purifies a world of sin out of it. But perhaps I am putting it too badly. I shall present my carefully bathed eyes and well-brushed culture at a tempting breakfast table, and be as square a fellow as I would wish Jim to be to me.

Midnight again.

We have talked it all out, and for the millionth time I thank my sainted Irish ancestors for my sense of humor. For it suddenly strikes me as funny. If only Jim could view it so! But he is hideously solemn about it. He is hideously solemn about it. "I don't care at all for her, Ann," he kept repeating, running his fingers through his hair in a distractingly way. "But when she comes east, can't we just get along and take things in the old, old, old way?"

"Jim, I'm worried about you," I said sharply, leaving off my bantamian manner and taking Jim impartially by the shoulders. "This is too absurd. I am not the sort of woman to make excuses for you and Mrs. Fribble under the circumstances."

"You have told me you do not care for an impossible woman, and I know you love me with the best of your rather cold nature. Very well, then. The case is simple. No man need stand the unwelcome attentions of a woman. Friendship and courtesy are due her. This ends the question. Now let me state the two obvious ways."

"Jim questioned me with a look. "It is not so simple as you think," he said, and my heart skipped a beat. The blood rose from my face. "Jim, I saw and added nothing. I mean I cannot drop her like a newly made acquaintance. There are things she needs advice on."

"Then advise her in your own home, Jim. I saw the hard, obstinate look I knew so well come into my husband's eyes. If he cared for this woman it would be different. But he doesn't yet.

TESTED RECIPES.

Cream of Parsnip Soup—Scald one pint of milk with a slice of onion, remove onion and add milk to one-half cup cream, parsnips, rubbed through a sieve. Season with salt and pepper, thicken with one and one-half tablespoons flour moistened with a little milk, and add one tablespoon butter. This makes a very delicious luncheon dish and is a change from the more common cream soup.

Celery Cabbage Salad—Celery cabbage is much cheaper than lettuce now and is very wholesome since it contains so many mineral salts. Serve either with a plain French dressing or a fancy dressing. The Russian dressing may be made by adding two tablespoons chili sauce to one-quarter cup boiled salad dressing.

Apple Sauce in Cranberry—Boil one pint cranberries, put through sieve and sweeten them (not yellow). Place quartered apples in casserole or stew tin, cover with cranberry juice and cook slowly (uncovered) until done. This is pretty and very tasty.

Brown Muffins—One cup whole wheat flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup sugar, four teaspoons baking powder, one cup bran, one egg beaten light, one and one-quarter cups milk, three tablespoons melted shortening.

Sift the first fine ingredients together twice. Add bran, beaten egg and shortening. Mix thoroughly. Bake in well greased tins in hot oven about 25 minutes.

DISCOVERIES.
When a loaf of bread has become dry, wet it all over with cold water, wrap it in a damp cloth and put it in a hot oven for 15 minutes. You will find it taste like bread.

When preparing cheese to use your vegetable slicer instead of grating it. This saves much time and makes the cheese thin enough to melt immediately.

When using candles for a birthday cake, keep them on ice a day before and they will burn steadily and evenly.

A little left-over jelly or canned fruit can be used in mincemeat and always adds to the flavor. Oranges that are too sour to eat also improve the mincemeat, if a little extra sugar is added.

The yolks of eggs, when only the whites are used, may be kept several days if covered with cold water and put in a cool, dark place.

For bacon fat—To prevent crust forming over a cooked bacon while standing in a kettle, lay a clean cloth or napkin, wrung out of hot water, over the top of the kettle.

STRAIGHTENING BOW LEGS

In a communication to the editor of the New York Medical Journal, September 6, 1919, a San Francisco orthopedic surgeon observes that it is "amazing how the profession advances in new achievements and clings with the utmost pertinacity to traditional blunders." He then goes on to describe the treatment of bow legs in children as it is managed in London, where there is a great amount of rickets and the doctors have acquired exceptional experience and skill in treating the condition.

"Bow legs of any appreciable degree should never be permitted to go untreated after the child has learned to walk. If the deformity exists in exaggerated form it should be corrected as soon as the infant is old enough to wear a leather shoe."

"A simple little straight splint of light wood padded so as to protect the intercondylar notch, which means the inner ankle prominence, at one end and the inner side of the head of the fibula" (head of the shin bone) "at the other" is placed on the inner side of the leg and foot. The lower end of this splint should be attached by a heavy leather sash to the inner edge of the sole of the boot so as to hold the splint at the lower end over the malleoli. A small strap should buckle around the head of the tuba (which would mean just below the knee), fixing the upper end of the splint at that point. Three strips of elastic webbing long enough to surround the leg and splint are also attached to each piece of webbing so that the buckle will be fixed at the posterior border of the splint. The sash should be tight as they will cause pain. They must be however sufficiently tight to produce mild pressure over the greatest convexity of the deformity.

"This method will straighten 99 percent or more of cases, especially those involving rickets, and will correct the deformity in from three to four months. The splints need be applied only in the daytime. If the child is able to walk he can run about painlessly and get well at the same time. ANSWER—No."

WOMEN TO PURCHASE BIRTHPLACE OF T. R.

Mrs. John Henry Hammond, president of the Woman's Roosevelt Memorial Association, announced in New York that plans had progressed to the point of buying without obligation the site of Theodore Roosevelt's birthplace at 23 East 26th street and the adjoining property.

"Plans for a program of Americanization for Roosevelt House are

"We regard the acquisition of the property as a matter of importance," Mrs. Hammond said, "as it is the first step in the plan of the women of America to honor of the memory of Theodore Roosevelt. When additional funds are secured we shall proceed to carry out the two-fold purpose of the Woman's Roosevelt Memorial Association: First: to rebuild the birthplace of Colonel Roosevelt exactly as it stood in 1858 when he was born and to connect it with the adjoining building under the name of Roosevelt House. Secondly: to establish a center in the spirit of Americanism to perpetuate for all time for all Americans the Americanism which Theodore Roosevelt typified.

Copyrighted A. C. McClure & Co.

"It is accomplished through organized effort by these men—Black Abolitionists, those called-haters of slavery. They are banded together in a secret society for this one purpose, and have what they call stations scattered all along at a certain distance apart—a night's travel—from the Mississippi to the Canadian line, where the fugitives are hidden and fed. A station keeper, and to him only permitted to know a few miles of the route, those he must cover—the system is perfect, and many are engaged in it who are never even suspected."

"And this man—is he one?"

"Yes—a leader, he operates the most dangerous station of all. The escaping slaves come to him first."

She said no further questions, and after a moment turned away, resting back against the edge of the cockpit with chin cupped in the hollow of her hand. The profile of her face was clearly defined by the starlight reflected by the river, and I found it hard to withdraw my eyes.

A movement by the negro attracted me.

"There is a small creek about four miles above the Landing, Sam," I said shortly. "Do you think you could find it?"

"On de Missouri side, sah? Ah reckon Ah cud."

CHAPTER VIII

The Dawn of Deeper Interest
It tested his skill as a boatman to locate the exact spot sought amid that gloom, yet he finally attained to it closely enough so that I was able to get ashore, wading partly thigh deep in water and mud. I endeavored to locate the creek which I had provisioned earlier in the evening. Had disappeared from its moorings. No trace of it could be found in the darkness, although I devoted several minutes to the search. To my mind this was positive evidence that Poco had run off, accompanied by the two frightened women, and that, finally despairing of my arrival, had departed with them up the river. In all probability we would overtake the party before morning, certainly before they could attain the mouth of the Illinois. I made my best bid to the steamer with this information and the laboring engine began to chug even while I was briefly explaining to Rene. She listened almost wearily, asking but few questions, and both of us soon lapsed into silence. A little later she had pillow'd her head on her arms and apparently had fallen asleep.

I must have dozed myself as the hours passed, although hardly aware of doing so. It was faint and dim, a promise more than a realization of approaching day, yet already sufficient to afford me view of the shore at our right and to reveal the outline of that portion of land adjoined,utting into the stream. The mist rising from off the water in vaporous clouds obscured all else, rendering the scene weird and unfamiliar. It was indeed a desolate view, the nearly land low, and without verdure in many places overgrown, and the trees stunted and small. Only that distant point appeared clearly defined and real, with the slow brightening sky beyond. I endeavored to arouse myself from stupor, rubbing the sleep from my eyes. Rene had changed her posture, but still slumbered, with face completely covered by her hair. I was wide awake and turned toward me grinning, at my first movement. Instinctively I liked the fellow—he appeared both intelligent and trustworthy.

"Daylight, is it?" I said, speaking low so as not to wake the girl. "I must have been asleep."

"Yas, dat; yers a bin a-noddin' fer long time. Ah was bout ter stir up, sah; for Ah reckon as how we mos' din'."

"Most where?" staring about incredulously. "Oh, yes, Rassuer creek. Have we made that distance already?"

"Wal, we's bin a-goin' et a mighty good gait, sah. She ain't done foolin' us all them night," his hand laid lovingly on the girl's shoulder. "Nebber klicked up now, no kin'd—just chug, chug-chug right long." "Pearl like she sorter know'd dis nigger fer ter git away. Enthow, we bin movin' long now right smart fer bout four hours, I say. Rassuer creek and just round dat p'int yonder. It's mighty dark, though, sah."

"It was right, but it was broad daylight when we reached them, the eastern sky a glorious crimson, and the girl sitting up staring at the brilliant coloring as though it pictured to her the opening of a new world.

The passage of a few hundred yards revealed the mouth of Rassuer creek, so crooked and encircled upon by the rocks that the present invasion of the center of the river. The water was not deep, yet fortunately proved sufficiently so for our purpose although we were obliged to both pole and paddle the boat upward against the slow current, and it required an hour of hard labor to place the craft safely beyond the first bend whereupon the ground was covered by the interwoven fronds of trees. Hero we made fast to the bank.

I assisted Rene ashore, and aided her to climb to a higher level, carpeted with grass. The broad river was invisible, but we could look directly down on the boat, where Sam had busily been running through the pocketed seas of something or other. He came ashore presently bearing some corn pone and a goodly portion of jerked beef. Deciding it would be better not to attempt a fire, we divided this and made the best meal possible, meanwhile discussing the situation around and the wireless man on the ship.

"Is there any harm in my singing a song?"

"The people upstairs object. Your voice is terrible. I don't blame them."

"Get out of here anyway I want to practice on the piano."

THE WISHING PLANE

BY WILLIS WINTER

You remember, in yesterday's story, Jack and Jane had climbed up onto Captain Bold's lap to hear his tales of the adventures of the submarine, "she" and his undersigned had left the children at Dr. Chee's home on Beautiful Island.

"Well," said Captain Bold, "when I tell you folks I had orders to go right to Japan, but we hadn't gone far when suddenly another message arrived. You know all the boats have wireless machines and operators on board—to hunt for ships that had become helpless and lost at sea."

"Such me sah," he said clumsily, as he paused before me, rubbing his head, his eyes wandering below. "I told you folks I had orders to go right to Japan, but we hadn't gone far when suddenly another message arrived. You know all the boats have wireless machines and operators on board—to hunt for ships that had become helpless and lost at sea."

AMERICAN LEGION

College Courses Offered Free
By Correspondence Methods
To War Vets as Extra Bonus

Arrangements have been completed by THE GAZETTE to cooperate with the University Extension division of the University of Wisconsin in placing before all ex-service men and women of this city and vicinity correspondence courses under the Soldier's educational bonus law. Blanks will be ready for distribution to all interested persons at the Gazette office Monday and may be procured there on any business day until 1 p.m. or on Saturdays until 12 m.

Under the bill, any man or woman who was in the service, and is qualified to receive the educational bonus but who is not availing himself of the full time educational opportunity offered may take, without cost, these university correspondence courses.

Scope of Extension Work—This correspondence study instruction comprises over 400 courses adapted to almost all classes of needs. It includes a large percentage given in residence at the university for credit towards a degree and may be secured by properly qualified students. Its specific purpose, however, is to teach those who have had small advantage through simplified, easily understood course-workmen, garage men and auto repair men, drafting men, carpenters, plumbers, contractors, road builders, clerks, bookkeepers and many others who are engaged in the essential occupations will find subjects necessary for a large success in their trades.

University Credit

Regular high school subjects are offered for the men and women who have not completed their high school courses. A graduate of a high school may take approximately the first two years of university work through correspondence and may receive credit for it. A graduate of a Normal school may take approximately one year of university work through correspondence and receive credit for same. For the man or woman who is planning to attend school next fall, this opportunity of receiving credit before enrolling for the regular session should not be overlooked.

General Education

The University Extension can give a person almost complete college education without his receiving a degree or complete engineering education than that which fits him for a particular line of work. Thus, a man who never expects to go to school can satisfy his own desire for an education and become a trained man.

Engineering

There are over 80 different courses given through correspondence devoted to three main branches of engineering: civil, electrical and mechanical. It is not necessary that a man have any particular schooling to take up the work he comes in with, practical arithmetic and headed gradually up through the higher courses of study. In this work a man starts to study where he has left off, or in other words, where he is qualified to start, not only from an educational standpoint but from the standpoint of practical experience. William Burke, former wire chief of the La Crosse Telephone company, took work for eight years with the Extension Division and upon entering the army was transferred in a short time to the Sheffield School at Yale to the officer's training camp for the naval corps. The Sheffield School is a private school and no man is allowed to enroll there without first having received a university education. The authorities considered Mr. Burke's eight years of evening study the same as or equal to a university degree. He was the only man out of about 1800 who was not a college graduate. He made good.

Business

For the man or woman who expects to make a commercial life his work, the Extension Division offers a very complete study in business subjects. The general curriculum of business, types of business organization, industrial management, marketing methods, bookkeeping, accounting problems, the law of contracts, the law of sales, the law of commercial paper, the law of private corporations, the law of insurance, Retail selling, Retail Advertising, Commercial Correspondence, Commercial and Industrial Geography; the Labor Movement, Transportation, Elements of Saving and Investment.

offered for the women who have seen service. For the teachers, who will also include men, there are offerings covering courses in the College of Teaching, Development of Childhood and Youth, Educational Psychology, The Child and Elementary Education, History of Modern Education, Social Development and Education, Advanced Educational Psychology, History of American Education, Administration and Supervision of Education, Organization and Curriculum of the High School. For those who expect to take up the work of visiting nurses and wish to study home problems, or who are planning to get married, the Extension Division offers: Planning the Household, Dietetics, The House and Its Equipment, Spending Money, Family Income, Home Nursing, the Prospective Mother, The Child in Health, the Child in Disease, Sewing, Dressmaking, Infants' Clothing, Home Furnishings and Decoration. This year the woman who has seen service exceptional opportunity to plan a course of study for herself.

The American Legion is behind this movement heart and soul, as they feel that it is up to every soldier, sailor, marine and nurse to see that every man and woman who was in the service has the advantage of this opportunity that the state is offering. This is the opportunity of a lifetime to many men and women, and men who understand the significance of this educational bill must use their influence to see that every man takes up some course of study. All the state can do is to offer this opportunity. It is up to the men themselves to see that soldiers take advantage of this chance to improve themselves and their education.
